

We do workshops for youth teaching about mental health, vulnerabilities, sex, trafficking, anger, management, addiction, safe relationships, peer to peer support, expectations of relationships, for adults, versus other kids, prevention, beyond protection, online exploitation, safety, self-worth, how to not become a trafficker, how to protect yourself, how to reach out for support, we also give Volunteer hours. And all of our workshops, whether it is for trainings for staff or whether it is for Youth, all of our workshops are played based for learning so that you're not just sitting through lecture our goal and majority of our workshops and trainings as well go through a four week period so it's not just one time I'm coming in and we're talking about it. It's multiple times we come in once a week for about four weeks And we train so that way it's more in depth and you can understand better and get more of a wraparound understanding when it comes to these things we also offer incentives and prizes, especially when we're working with Youth. Our goal is to be able to get the youth engaged as much as possible versus just feeling like we're coming in and we're forcing them to learn something that they probably don't even care about. We also feed them during that time so whenever we go to do a workshop, we make sure we have food we have dinner we have gift cards. We also look out for Youth who might have any vulnerabilities or might need any support. Sometimes you know whether that's just something as simple as running shoes or grocery cards or something as Access to a therapist or a peer support or maybe they need extra support in school so we can connect them to a tutor or if they're being bullied we helped them learn how to advocate for themselves and we're also able to step in and help advocate for them if they're not comfortable advocating for themselves

We offer court support, labor, and delivery support, we offer support for doctors appointments, as well as as we hope survivors are those at risk advocate for themselves or we stepping an advocate for them. We don't just work with survivors. We work with those at risk. Our job is not only to be pulling people out of the river to stop people from falling in.

We train organizations on trauma for care as well as removing biases and understanding what real support looks like for survivors, and those at risk had a spot signs as well as how to lower the expectations of what a perfect survivor would look like.

We offer peer support crisis support as well as peer family support so we work with them on a list of programs that we have the families or survivors or those at risk pick out and we walk through them for anger management, self-worth, exploration, safe relationships, how to not become a trafficked, Safeway to make money how to build up your job how to do taxes we also work on life skills so that could be laundry that could be how to cope how to cook how to clean We work with families on how to support those who are at risk or who have gone through trafficking as well as how to handle situations of vulnerabilities that come to play. Also, we work with parents to build better relationships with their children and the youth with their family. We also work with a lot of shelters and new shelters in the area our focus isn't just Youth. We also work with a lot of adults so we work with the adult shelters women shelters, massive violence, shelters, use shelters and we accept clients from them. We also go out of our way to go in and we trained staff on signs all that stuff for trafficking and how to support people who have been through traffic. And our peer support program we do a phase peer support so it starts with one month three month six month 12 month and then as they move on if they continue to meet our support, we'll go for another six months 12 months again and eventually our goal is to have them graduate our program and we have a certificate and you know we don't just leave them and be like there's no other support. We told them no matter what we are an open door if you need us even if it's 10 years on the road we got you and we offered them either supports as well.

We all also offer a hobby to hustle program where we teach you to turn their hobbies into small businesses and we help get them exposure that they need so they can grow that business. We train them on social media. We train them on taxes, budgeting reporting your income, we train them on how to run a business how to market yourself how to build up your résumé how to find something that you're actually passionate about so we work with them on multiple of their different hobbies till they find one that fits sometimes it's just one hobby. We also helped them find the customers and generate an income as well as we train them how to find their own customers make business cards flyers apply for markets vendors we also partner with multiple businesses and CEOs to help match youth or those at risk or survivors to mentor who matches their needs so for instance, we have a tax CEO who comes in and trains all about AI. We have somebody for scrum we have somebody who's a chef we have somebody who's a crochet. We have somebody who is a stylist we have somebody who's a model we have somebody who is an activist. We have somebody who's a writer. We have somebody who works out in communities and helps kids we have a teacher we also partner with multiple businesses and CEOs as well so if somebody that they are mentoring end up working well with them, they have a chance of being hired onto this business. We're also in the process of launching an app for Youth so we can find safe businesses that they can hang out at as well as pick up extra work so that not only will they get food, but they also get money and then on top of that I can build up their résumé without them, jumping from job to job and it opens up a whole other world where they're able to develop skills and find something that they're actually passionate and so they don't have to stay with one mentor they can go based off of how they're Feeling and what they enjoy and passionate about. We also train all volunteers and mentors before they mentor or hire on someone.

We also have a crisis therapist and a regular counselor/therapist as well so if we have a survivors or in need of support, we are able to offer them that.

At Phoenix Arise Foundation we're also putting pushing for change in legislation as in holding hotels and motels accountable for their part in trafficking we already have the Canadian and Ontario hotel Association on board as well as multiple government members who want to see change happen so that we can mandate training and hotels as well as mandated, reporting and signage

Our main goal is to build a survivor centre for those at risk and those who have experienced trafficking where it will be a safe haven, it won't feel clinical when you walk in so our goal is to have like a oasis when you step in it feels more like a spa and a retreat versus the typical clinical centre our goal is to have wraparound supports where we are able to teach life skills were to match people with mentors where we can hire on survivors and whatever field that they specialize in so we're not just looking higher on survivors as survivors whether that looks like for Peer Support Client or whether that's life skills or cooking class or cleaning class or tech-support or social media or running advance our goal is also to give survivors a chance at life and not in a way where they are always going to be known as a survivor, but where they can actually excel in their passions and dreams. we also want to offer legal support house supports. That would be doctors. We also wanna offer support when it comes to mental health. I'll be a psychiatrist therapist counselors, peer support crisis support support groups as well. We also want to offer homesteading so we can teach people how to grow their own food save money budget, as well as as we want to have a dietician and nutritionist. Our goal is to also have an acupuncturist we already have on team. We also want to have a yoga studio. We currently have some somebody who's going to be a yoga teacher. We also want each breath work and Reki our goal is to be a holistic as well as trauma informed and fully wraparound support versus so many survivors having to go from one place to another place to another place to be able to get all their support our goal is also to have a drop in centre where we can have mentors kinda just drop in so that survivors can come or those at risk could just come pop into the classes and see if that's something that they'd be passionate about

We also do conferences we sit on panels we host awareness events. We talk with parents teachers, everybody, and we also help other organizations fundraisers. We care so much about being trauma informed in and survivor centred

We also host donation drives so a lot of times instead of asking for money we ask for hat or gloves or tampons. We ask for blankets or socks or gift cards for instance in our last drive. We made a bunch of Christmas gifts for survivors and in that we had Tim Hortons gift cards we had chocolate we had blankets. We had hand warmers foot warmers. We had socks. We have gloves we had scarves. We had hats we had Toothbrushes and hygiene products and skin care, products and hand sanitizer and perfume and lotion and little handwritten notes in every single drive, we do we write handwritten notes in each and every package and it's not something where it will make somebody obvious as a survivor is normally inspirational quotes

We're also partnered with Durham regional police star victim services Durham children's services we work very closely with covenant house. We work very closely with women's habitat.
